Home sweet home: Critical support for high-risk new parents

Even the most stable, prepared new parents will admit: A newborn baby can turn life upside down. But what about those parents-to-be who are children themselves—who may have experienced neglect and abuse firsthand, and for whom money, experience, role models and support are limited or non-existent? Without intervention at the earliest stage, this vulnerable population of new parents is at high risk of perpetuating the cycle of child abuse and neglect.

Evidence-based home-visitation programs are a way to educate fragile first-time parents, establish the crucial parent-child bond, connect families to a broader network of support resources, and effectively stop the cycle of abuse in its tracks. Last year, amidst crippling state budget cuts, NWCF granted $100,000 in critical funding to eight programs that provide in-home, personalized parenting education and support: Childhaven, Encompass, Healthy Start, Kindering Center, Mary Bridge Children’s Hospital, Navos, Thrive by Five Washington, and Toddler Learning Center.

While the programs differ slightly in methodology and the populations they serve, they all connect trained professionals with at-risk families, prenatally and/or during the first three years of life. Since services are provided in the family’s home, the home visitor is able to provide long-term personalized guidance, and quickly intervene if the family is overwhelmed or it appears that they are at risk for abuse or neglect.

By working with new parents during the child’s earliest stages of development, home visitors are able to help address parental risk factors and establish positive parenting practices early on. Habits are formed. Trust is earned. Confidence is gained, and these young families learn that they are not alone. A network of support exists for them, along with the opportunity for a safe, healthy future for their child and family.

Studies evaluating evidence-based home visiting models “clearly affirm...the effectiveness of early-intervention services in avoiding child maltreatment, influencing a child’s developmental trajectory, and positively influencing the parent-child relationship. Over time, these benefits can translate into substantial societal savings on health care, education and welfare expenditures.” Washington State Early Learning Plan, September 2010.
Healthy Start:
A Closer Look at Home Visiting

Healthy Start is one of the home visiting programs NW Children’s Fund supported in 2011. Healthy Start is an intensive parenting education and support program for low-income, first-time parents; two-thirds are still in their teens, and the balance are 20 to 22. Healthy Start includes home visitation, using the evidence-based Parents as Teachers curriculum, as a primary component of its program.

In 2010, 385 families participated in Healthy Start’s program. Here’s a look at the impact they saw:

*Outcomes for families who had been part of the program long enough to establish measurable outcomes.

The need is great. Despite strong evidence of the impact of home visiting on improving child outcomes, Washington’s Department of Health reports that the total capacity of the evidence-based home visiting programs in Washington is enough to serve only 2-11% of at-risk families.

Our Mission
NW Children’s Fund’s mission is to end the cycle of child abuse and neglect by investing in programs for at-risk children and their families, and inspiring informed philanthropy devoted to improving child welfare.
Letter from the Executive Director

October 2011

Dear Friends,

Thanks to your thoughtful generosity, NW Children’s Fund transformed thousands of young lives last year through our investment in innovative programs across Western Washington.

This Annual Report details the work we could not have accomplished without your partnership. For the year ending July 31, 2011, NW Children’s Fund was able to:

- Distribute $725,100 in grants to over 60 powerful and deserving programs for high-risk children and their families.
- Ensure that 100% of individual donations went directly to grants, thanks to underwriting of all our operating expenses.

We are inspired daily by the research that clearly shows that child abuse and neglect are preventable and treatable. Together, we can do so much to help our most vulnerable young citizens.

Please turn the page and read about the portfolio of effective programs you supported this past year through your partnership with NW Children’s Fund. We look forward to continuing this critical, life-changing work with you on behalf of children who need our help.

Respectfully,

Victoria Peattie Helm
Executive Director, NW Children’s Fund
